DIPLOMAS GIVEN ACADEMY CADETS

THIRTY-SEVEN STUDENTS
ACHIEVE GRADUATION HONORS
AT MILITARY SCHOOL

The commencement exercises at the Army and Navy academy in Pacific Beach last Wednesday closed one of the institution's most successful years. Over three hundred students, representing countries all over the world and nearly every state in the Union, marched in military review before Major General Joseph Kuhn, U. S. A., retired, and Brigadier General S. D. Butler, who were guests of honor at the invitation of Colonel Thomas A. Davis, president of the academy, who awarded diplomas to thirty-seven students. James W. Foley, Pasadena, author and lecturer, addressed the class, the largest yet to graduate from the academy.

Company B, of which Robert D. Stewart of San Diego is captain, won the military drill competition.

Diplomas were awarded to the following cadets: Joseph E. Abry, Cebu, P. I.; James H. Beckham, Los Angeles; Robert C. Boone, Los Angeles; Harold E. Chasnoff, Los Angeles; Benjamin F. Dingman, Topeka, Kans.; Peter J. Etchebarren, Reno, Nev.; Rudolph Halm, Pasadena; Carl B. Hillard, Redlands; John D. Hillseth, Long Beach; Amos E. Light, Greencastle, Ind.; Austin A. Martin, Los Angeles; Cecil Pereira, Glendale, Allan Robertson, Fullerton; Allen L. Rosenberg, Santa Monica; Ferrie F. Smith, Sierra Madre; Manfred R. Stever, South Pasadena; Robert L. Stewart, Jr., San Diego; Charles L. Stock, Ensenada, Baja California; Spencer M. Crump, Long Beach; Harvig B. Henry, Pasadena; Frederick W. Muller, San Diego; Harold R. Oulds, Jr., San Diego; Haven W. Denison, Pacific Beach; Geo. R. Tucker, Fessenden, N. D.; Robert H. West, Cincinnati; George D. Campbell, Pasadena; Davis P. Chandler, Glendale; Edwin J. Coger, Hollywood; Werner R. Stoll, Los Angeles; Elijah R. Donehoo, Dawson Springs, Ky.; Robert G. Gore, Jr., San Diego; Henry R. Hatfield, Covington, Ky.; Harris S. Lacy, Los Angeles; Kenneth W. Thompson, San Diego; William Jones, San Bernardino; Francis H. Poyas, Los Angeles; and Clemet H. Stewart, Pasadena.

FEATURE PICTURE
TO BE SHOWN TWO DAYS
AT GRANADA THEATRE

A world's premier of a locally-made picture is the announcement that the Granada theatre is making to its patrons. Only recently, the Goodwill Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles made a production which is released under the title of "Eyes Right," using the San Diego Army and Navy academy as the background. Through the efforts of Col. Thos. A. Davis, president of the academy, the Granada is able to announce that on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 15-16, "Eyes Right" will have its premier showing at that theatre, where it will be shown in conjunction with the regular program for the evening, at no advance in the admission prices. "Eyes Right" has been dedicated to the officers and student members of the academy who gave their all during the World War. It was filmed at the academy and is a story of academy life. The picture, which features Francis X. Bushman, Jr., supported by a stellar cast, will be shown but once each day, at approximately 8:30 p. m.

SILVER SPRAY PLUNGE CHANGES OWNERSHIP

A property deal was recently effected by which J. N. Douglass of San Diego has secured the proprietorship from D. J. Spencer and William Dougherty of the Silver Spray Plunge on the ocean front.

PROGRAM OF SPECIALS
PROMISES BUSY WEEK
FOR THEATRE-GOERS

If you are a theatre-goer at all, then this is going to be your busy week, for the Granada theatre is offering a program of specials that would tempt even a newlywed away from the fireside his first night at home. And even if you are not a dyed-in-the-wool fan, yet you can hardly afford to miss John Barrymore and delicious Delores Costello in "The Sea Beast," or Norma Talmadge and Ronald Colman in "Kiki," or the double feature bill which brings Louise Dresser to the Granada screen in "Fifth Avenue," together with the world's premier showing of "Eyes Right," a feature picture that was made at and in conjunction with the San Diego Army and Navy academy at Pacific Beach.

This Saturday the Granada is offering a program that is made to order for the children—of all ages. Hoot Gibson in "The Calgary Stampede" is the feature picture, embellished by a Grantland Rice Sport Review, the Pathe Review and a Gump comedy.

And, lady! lady! what a show on Sunday and Monday, June 13-14! When the ten best pictures of the year are finally chosen, somewhere near the very top will be found "The Sea Beast," in which John Barrymore makes his one and only appearance of the season, and gives to the screen something upon which you may spend all the praises at your command and still feel that you have not done the piece more than half justice.

A double feature bill on Tuesday and Wednesday, which includes the world premier showing of "Eyes Right" a picture made at the San Diego Army and Navy academy at Pacific Beach, is the announcement that should test the Granada's capacity. The feature picture for these two nights is "Fifth Avenue," a Robert Vignola production, which features Louise Dresser, supported by Alan Forrest and Marguerite de la Motte. "Eyes Right," which is a product of the Goodwill Pictures Corporation, features Francis X. Bushman, Jr., supported by a stellar cast, which includes the students and personnel of the Army and Navy academy at Pacific Beach. With the exception of one or two scenes, the picture in its entirety was taken at the academy and at Torrey Pines lodge. It was shown recently at the Granada at a special preview for the faculty and students of the academy and bears their hearty approval.

The screen can give nothing finer than Clarence Brown's production of "Kiki," with Norma Talmadge, which will be the attraction for Thursday and riday. "Kiki" is Norma Talmadge's biggest hit, and supporting Miss Talmadge are film favorites of the first water.

NEW ILLUMINATED CURTAIN AT THE GRANADA THEATRE IN LA JOLLA

According to all plans, the new illuminated advertisement curtain, which the Flagg-Slattery company of Los Angeles is installing at the Granada, will make its official debut on Sunday night, June 13. The curtain arrived in La Jolla Tuesday, adn John Slattery, junior member of the firm, is superintending its installation. The company only recently installed a like curtain in Pantages at San Diego, which has been the subject of much favorable comment. According to Mr. Slattery, the curtain at the Granada is one of the most beautiful ever turned out by this company.

SAN DIEGO'S POPULATION ESTIMATED 'ROUND 150,000

The new city directory, published by Frye & Smith, is being distributed and is a most commendable publication. With a list of 66,498 names, using the cusomary multiple of two and one-half, which allows for wife and children under 18 years of age, the population of the cit yis estimated at 149,620, an increase of 13,000 during the last year. The directory contains, in addition to the alphabetical list of names, a householder's guide and a classified business directory of the county.

Passing of J. D. Spreckels

This week has been epochal in marking the end of the earthly endeavors of the most outstanding figure in the history of San Diego. At 2:40 o'clock last Monday afternoon John Diedrich Spreckels passed on, following a long illness, at his home in Coronado. Funeral services were held at the residence last Wednesday afternoon in the presence of immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. His remains will be cremated and his ashes transferred to San Francisco, where they will be placed with those of his wife and his son, John D. Spreckels, Jr. Arrangements are being made for a public tribute to the deceased eminent citizen at Sunday services to be held in front of the organ pavilion in Balboa park. The passing of John D. Spreckels, while not unexpected, proved a very sad blow to the entire city.

Born in the South

John Diedrich Spreckels was born at Charleston, S. C., August 16, 1853. He was a son of Claus and Anna Spreckels, pioneer residents of California. While he was an infant, his parents moved to New York, and two years later came to California, locating at San Francisco.

While a youth he attended the public schools of San Francisco, and was a student of Oakland college. To promote his education as a chemist and engineer, he went to Hanover,

SEA WALL INVESTIGATION

The money on the appropriation of $2000 which was granted by the city council some time ago for the purpose of conducting an investigation and survey for the proposed sea wall, and was later declared impossible because of lack of funds, is now available. City Engineer Jorgensen was out one day this week looking over the ocean front, and it is expected that this week will also see some actual work started on the test holes.

DISPOSAL OF RUBBISH

Our dirt drives are being sprinkled and scraped, which certainly helps a lot. Now, if we can inveigle the city into helping us with the garbage problem, the beach would be considerably more attractive. The days of collection have been changed from Tuesdays and Fridays to Mondays and Thursdays. Last week the garbage was collected, but the rubbish was left undisturbed except by the dogs and the wind. Steps are being taken to systematize the collection of this debris, and then it will be absolutely up to each and every resident of the beach to avoid these unsightly heaps of trash on every corner.

The Bridge club met this week with Mrs. F. E. Lundblade at her home of Rockaway court. Those present, besides the club members, were Mrs. Shirley Arnold, Mrs. Harry K. Turner and Mrs. W. C. Everett. Prizes were won by Mrs. D. H. Thede, Mrs. H. B. Luke and Mrs. J. A. Harris.

MORE ROAD SIGNS NEEDED

Along the highway running through Pacific, Mission and Ocean Beaches there are so many southbound motorists asking, "Can we get to San Diego this way?" that the residents of these sections are growing to realize more and more what an unparalleled asset they have in the Pacific Ocean, and that automobile visitors from the north are going to stick to the ocean front just so long as they are assured by reliable signs and information that the road is no farther that way.

Mr. N. E. Brown, assistant general manager of the Mission Beach company, says in a recent communication: "I think we all realize that it (Pacific, Mission and Ocean Beaches, Point Loma, Marine and Naval Bases, etc.) is the scenic route to San Diego. A stranger looking over to San Diego from the Loma Portal point of the highway certainly obtains an impression that is totally lost by entering San Diego over any other route."

You members of the auto clubs can help to direct this traffic along the route it would prefer to travel. Write or speak to the officers of your auto club, asking them to bring their directing signs from the north county line up-to-date in the way of names and mileage, and to put in some where there are none at all now. An example of the latter is at the corner of Bacon and Voltaire streets, in Ocean Beach.

FREE RADIO DANCE

Saturday night all the residents of Mission Beach and their friends are invited to a radio dance in Harry Turner's office in the new Harris building. It is one of a series of get-together parties, the first of which was the wiener roast on the beach, sponsored by the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce. It is hoped that there will be a good crowd Saturday evening, as a good time is guaranteed. There will be no charge.

Some Sayings By Budd Carberry

FAMOUS CHEF GIVES MOST EXALTED PRAISE TO
"ESPANOLA" RELISHES

Known far and wide as the best chef on the Pacific coast for preparing fish dinners, Budd Carberry states that he has found the relish par excellent in the wonderful "Espanola" manufactured at Ocean Beach by the Earle Products Co. of 5068 Niagara avenue. The following open letter from the famous fish caterer to General Manager E. Earle, is self-explanatory:

"I am experimenting on an 'Espanola Waffle' and also an 'Espanola Goulash,' both of which have never as yet been on the market. The 'Espanola Waffle' is especially delicious and light. The 'Espanola Goulash' is just the finest breakfast a man can eat.

"If these articles are boosted, I believe a great trade will spring up as they are new and the best on the market.

"I tried 'Espanola' on my tables like I do Worcestershire Sauce and tomato catsup, and they don't grab those up like 'Espanola.' Why, they grab it like a tramp grabs his breakfast. Why, I put a small can on one table when a man and wife ate a fish dinner. There was an empty bottle for me there when I went to pick up my dishes—they even ate it on mere bread. Why, they never eat the butter at all but just spread their bread with it.

"Just try clam chowder made with 'Espanola.' Note the flavor. There is no clam chowder put up today can compare with it. When I said I had the world beat on clam chowder, I meant it; now I know it. I am known from one coast to the other, and they all say they have eaten at Budd's Fish House with the man who put the salt in the ocean. We will try 'Espanola' and say, "Oh, boy, it's good."

PAVILION BARBER SHOP—Under personal direction of A. H. Maiser. Skillful service, always.*

CARL SCHROEDER HAS WON FINE REPUTATION FOR EXPERT WORKMANSHIP

In the establishment of a general repair shop in the rear of his residence at 4840 West Point Loma boulevard, Carl Schroder is deserving of generous patronage. He has achieved a widespread reputation on the Pacific coast as an expert gunsmith and locksmith for the past twenty-eight years; and is a recognized authority on the building and repairing of radio sets. He also recharges batteries and rejuvenates radio tubes. Mr. Schroder gives special attention to the sharpening of lawnmowers, which are ground by him and not filed. Bicycle repair work is done at city prices with satisfaction guaranteed.

ANNUAL OUTING OF P. B. READING CLUB

The annual outing of the Pacific Beach Reading club was held Thursday, June 3, at the beautiful home and gardens of Mrs. F. T. Scripps. There was a good attendance and several out-of-town guests. After a short business session, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Scripps, who had chosen for her subject, "Better Homes." She gave a short and practical talk, and read several extracts from expressions of President Coolidge and others on the subject. Mrs. Minnie Pollock then read a short paper on "Better Homes," full of valuable suggestions, by W. Edgar Ulrich, architect, of La Jolla.

GOOD TIME BY FARMERETTES

The China painting classes of the San Diego night school were lavishly entertained by Mrs. Katherine Powell at her beach home, 825 Newport court, on Saturday, June 5. About seventy-five women, attired as farmerettes, weer the guests. The morning was spent at the Fun Zone, where none of the amusements were neglected. A banquet at noon was followed by surf bathing, bridge and contests, one of the most unique being the molding of tiny chewing gum vases, an art at which some of the guests proved themselves surprisingly proficient.

SMELT RUN FOR THIS WEEK-END

"JACK" NEUMONT SAYS
SLIPPERY LITTLE SHINY FISH
WILL BE PLENTIFUL

Smelt are due to run right after the new moon this week, according to "Jack" Neumont, of the Ocean Beach Bait House, who is recognized as an authority on all piscatorial subjects. He states that the exact dates for the appearance of the slippery little shiny fish will be Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday (June 11, 12, 13, 14), and they will begin to run about 9 o'clock on the first night and an hour later each night thereafter. It is also asserted that the marine visitors will come in large numbers at this season.

BRASS BAND CONCERT AT M. B. ROLLER RINK ON SUNDAY NIGHT

"Skate to the music of a brass band" forms the slogan adopted by Proprietor-Manager Ed A. Kickham for the patrons of his Mission Beach Roller Rink tomorrow (Sunday) night, June 13. The idea of enjoying music while roller-skating proved a decided success last Sunday night and the innovation will be repeated with plenty of loud music to vie with the racket raised by skates. It's great! Don't miss it!

The regular Tuesday night polo contests furnish plenty of thrills for a large and increasing clientele. The game next week will be a humdinger. Be there!

POINT LOMA LOT PRESENTED TO WIDOW

Mrs. Annie I. Savage, a widow living at 1912 Dale street, was presented a fine Point Loma homesite by John P. Mills for the Pantages, Mills, Shreve company at a ceremony attended by several persons at Sunset Cliffs last Sunday afternoon. Betty Jane Mills, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Mills, selected Mrs. Savage from among the crowd as recipient of the gift lot. Friends and strangers quickly surrounded the widow, offering congratulations, and she appeared overjoyed by her good fortune.

BEACH CASHIER WEDS
GIRLS' CLUB LEADER

E. B. Wilbern and Miss Helen Martin were united in marriage in a quiet home ceremony early this week, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Jones, 4638 Marlborough Drive, San Diego. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a small group of relatives and intimate friends. The couple left for a honeymoon trip to the north and plan to spend a week or more at Big Bear lake. Mr. Wilbern is cashier at the Mission Beach Amusement Center, and his bride is one of the energetic leaders in Y. W. C. A. and girls' club work.

JOLLY BEACH AFFAIR FOR NEWLY-WEDS

Announcement is made of the recent marriage of Allen Legge and Miss Margaret Corwin. The wedding kept a secret for several days, became known last Friday, and friends of the young couple arranged an impromptu and interesting celebration at the temporary Mission Beach home of the newlyweds. Miss Corwin is private secretary to R. E. Hicks, president and general manager of the Mission Beach Amusement corporation, operating the Fun Zone at Mission Beach.

DAVID K. E. BRUCE

David K. E. Bruce, whose engagement to Miss Ailsa Mellon, daughter of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and one of the wealthiest heiresses in the world, has been announced. Bruce is the son of Senator William Cabell Bruce of Maryland. He has just graduated from the American foreign service school in the State department and is assigned as vice consul at Rome.

WENT BROKE AND HID

Baldwin Wood, San Francisco clubman, photographed in an out-of-the-way hiding place, where he was found by reporters of the San Francisco Examiner, following his mysterious disappearance after it became known that $400,000 worth of property slipped through his fingers on poor investments. He was entrusted with the estate of his father, but everything he invested in failed. He lived in costly apartments at one of the city's leading hotels, kept a country place, belonged to the most exclusive clubs and was looked upon as a most successful man until the capital was all gone and then he dropped from sight.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

25 COTTAGES FROM THIS TREE POSSIBLE

Standing in the timber holdings of the Little River Redwood Company near Crannell, Humboldt county, is a gigantic redwood which, if felled and milled, would make a sufficient quantity of lumber to construct twenty-one five-room bungalows. In a letter received a short time ago by State Forester M. B. Pratt, officials of the company state that the tree is 308 feet in height and measures twenty feet in diameter five feet above the ground. The board footage of the tree is calculated at 361,366.

Since the average amount of lumber that goes into a five-room bungalow is 17,000 board feet, the tree would furnish enough material to "build up" a street more than three blocks in length.

This mighty forest monarch is believed by State Forester Pratt to be one of the largest trees in the state outside of national forest areas.

The home of the Red Emperor grape, Exeter, Tulare county, wants a first-class band to toot the merits of Exeter and the Kiwanis club of Exeter proposes to get such an organization. Exeter has been without a band several years, but a committee is now actively engaged in listing prospective jobs and positions for musicians who might desire to locate in Exeter and play on the side along with a goodly number of regulars who will be used as the nucleus.

Tulare, Kings and Fresno counties were quite a revelation to a group of officials of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, from southern California, who have been spending the past few days in these counties on a tour of inspection. Conditions, they admitted, were much better than they had been led to believe and all admitted that unquestionably this section will receive a much higher rating for loan purposes.

While the heavy April rains in San Fernando valley benefitted most of the growers they did some damage to various matured crops, especially to the hundreds of acres of lettuce in the Reseda vicinity and between Reseda and Van Nuys. Just as the bulk of the lettuce crop was about to be harvested and shipped, the rains came, bursting the heads in the field. Some of this lettuce has been culled, harvested and shipped, but most of it was left in the fields.

The city manager of Visalia, Tulare county, is at present engaged in the task of developing a model poultry ranch on the Visalia municipal farm two miles west of Visalia. It will perhaps, be the first model poultry ranch actually developed and the property of any municipality in California and is to be developed for the double purpose of promoting the industry and materially adding to the city exchequer.

Officers in Marysville have about reached the conclusion that the Marysville offices of the Western Pacific railroad are the special object of the crooks of this section. Within the past few months the depot agent has been held up, box cars have been robbed, property stolen from the right of way, while most recently the baggage room was burglarized. Bedding shoes and clothing were included in the loot.

Old prospectors in Placerville, Eldorado county, were attempting to retrace the meandering course of a horse with gold-flecked hoofs, hopeful that they will find an earth pocket lined with gold. The excitement was caused when the horse was taken to a blacksmith shop to be shod. The blacksmith lifted up one of the animal's hoofs to put on new shoes, when the glitter of gold caught his eye.

The San Jose offices of the P. G. & E. will organize a "Sign of Progress" club in the near future it was announced from the Marysville offices of the company recently. The Marysville office formed a luncheon club under this name early this year and it has been so successful that other offices now want clubs modeled after it, San Jose being the first to take definite steps in that direction.

Tulare County Jersey cattle breeders are planning to organize a Jersey association, the object being to promote this particular breed in the county. At the present time there are said to be twelve dairymen in Tulare county specializing in Jersey cattle. They are expected to form the nucleus of the contemplated association.

The first step in a far-reaching plan to convert into tillable land 18,000,000 acres in California, rather than the 4,000,000 acres it is possible to irrigate under the doctrine of riparian rights was taken recently when a proposed constitutional amendment was filed with Attorney-General U. S. Webb.

At a location recently acquired in Merced by J. C. Cocanour in the industrial site of the Southern Pacific company, concrete foundation piers are being put down for a tomato packing shed, which the building contractor, expects to erect in time to permit packing to begin by the 1st of June.

The State Fish and Game Commission formally assumed a five-year lease on thirty acres of Yountville State farm for its proposed experiment in raising quail, partridges and pheasants to restock California mountain districts. The lease was approved by the State Board of Control.

The Seely section has the distinction of being first in the market in Imperial valley with tomatoes for the season of 1926, having sent out a crate on April 5.

The cornerstone of Sacramento's new memorial auditorium, now under construction was laid with colorful ceremonies recently by the California Grand Lodge of Masons.

At least a ten per cent reduction in insurance rates will be given grain farmers in the Oakdale district, Stanislaus county, because of the fire protection, afforded by the rural fire truck.

With a normal run off of water in June, the Oakdale and South San Joaquin irrigation districts will get storage this season, says the consulting engineer on the Melones reservoir project.

During the month of April the city clerk of Petaluma, issued building permits totaling $165,050, which is a record for the city. The largest permit was for St. Vincent's church for $130,000.

Forty thousand persons, half of whom were visitors, milled through the streets of Bakersfield recently inoculated with the gala spirit of Kern county's second annual "Cotton is King" festival.

Approval has been given the $2,000,000 power project of the Glenn-Colusa irirgation district, near Hamilton City, Glenn county, by the chief engineer of the district, according to recent announcements.

With a view to expediting the shipping and icing of eastbound fruit this season the Southern Pacific company has decided to increase its trackage, platforms and other facilities in the vicinity of Roseville.

A shortage of fruit hands in the Sacramento valley already this season has made itself manifest in many districts. This is according to Andrew G. Anderson, bureau manager of the state employment service office

California leads the nation in forest conservation matters, according to a report presented to directors of the California Development association at a two-day statewide conference held in San Francisco recently.

Hemet valley is preparing to harvest one of the largest apricot crops in its history. The trees are loaded with fruit and it is probable that the valley's previous high-crop total of 14,000 tons will be exceeded this year.

The use of narcotic drugs in California, is on the decline according to the belief expressed in Sacramento by Harry D. Smith, United States agent in charge of all narcotic law enforcement work in California, Nevada and Arizona.

That the new $70,000 parochial school of St. Marys, at Taft, will be completed in plenty of time to start school September 1, was the statement made by Rev. James P. Buckley, who has been in charge of St. Marys Catholic church in Taft since 1918.

Mrs. Mary Brooks of Sacramento, member of the first graduating class of the College of the Pacific—class of '53—will be in Stockton for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the institution, which will be celebrated during commencement week, June 13 to 15.

Because of high prices obtained for Irish potatoes in the Van Nuys vicinity this spring, many tomato and bean growers have turned their fields into potato farms, and this summer a very considerable crop is expected. Within the next two or three months it is predicted that potatoes will be cheaper than they have been for several years.

According to a government crop report issued on February 1, the Imperial irrigation district, at El Centro, contains 380,611 acres under cultivation, 155,080 of which is planted to alfalfa. Despite the success attained in vegetable and cotton growing here, dairying still remains the basic industry of valley ranchers, because of the fact that alfalfa does so well here.

The San Fernando valley agriculture club field crop contest is on, and thirty-five boys are doing everything they can to surpass each other in the quality and production of their crops. Each member in the contest has one-eighth of an acre of corn, onions, melons, potatoes, sweet potatoes or miscellaneous crops. Many of the last year's contestants have entered again.

La Hoh, the venerable healer of the Mohave Indian tribe, near Needles, is dead and a short time ago, his body, lashed to a burning raft, made its last journey alone down the Colorado river. The ancient sage, whose actual age seems to have been unknown even to himself, was a familiar figure in almost every Indian encampment in southern California, western Arizona, and Nevada.

Mariposa county's picturesque hills, from which thousands drew fortunes in the hectic gold mining era, was visited recently by several hundred members of the Merced County Chamber of Commerce automobile caravan, officially christening Murietta Trail, the one-time route of the notorious bandit who terrorized the San Joaquin valley and Mother Lode section of the state in the fifties.

Construction of three new vehicular ferry boats at San Francisco, costing $500,000 each, a third slip at the Oakland pier with an addition of 47,500 square feet of dock area, costing about $175,000, and extensive improvements at the Mission street vehicular terminals, are planned by the Southern Pacific. Contracts for the three boats will be let immediately.

The farmer and his family lead secluded lives, although the mechanical changes of the past twenty years have relieved the isolation. Automobiles, telephones, and the extension of interurban lines and the radio render life on the farm less lonesome

LOVE OF WILD LURES INDIAN GIRL TO DEATH

Two Quit School as Spring Calls, but Storm Overtakes Them.

Niobrara, Neb.—From the Rosebud Indian reservation across the state line in South Dakota has come a tale of love for the primitive Indian life on the part of two little Sioux Indian girls, who, although surrounded with all the conveniences afforded by a big modern boarding school, yet pined so strongly for the wild life of the tepee that they ran away from the school, braved a snowstorm at night, forded a big river, one freezing to death and the other displaying the greatest heroism in trying to save her little companion. Eventually the survivor reached an encampment of Indians and was saved.

Answer Call.

Laura High-Bald-Eagle and Libbie Never-Miss-A-Shot were the two little Indian girls. They were each thirteen years old. They came to St. Francis school last fall. They spent the hard winter months in the big brick building without pining. But with spring the call became so strong that they were determined to run away that night and go to their homes.

Shortly after they left the school the temperature started dropping. Then snow began falling. One of the sudden storms for which the Indian country of South Dakota is famous came up. The girls felt the sting of the wind through their light clothing.

Laura Had Ceased to Breathe.

In an hour they reached the banks of the Little White river. There was no bridge and no way of crossing at this point except by wading. The river is not deep but is very swift. Also, there are "pockets" in the bed of the stream.

In mid-stream Laura High-Bald-Eagle stepped into one of these pockets in deep swift water. She rolled over and over. Libbie Never-Miss-A-Shot came to her assistance and the two struggling little girls finally reached the other bank.

One Succumbs.

On land again, with their sodden garments rapidly stiffening in the cold, the two little girls continued their painful way across the river bottom in the direction of their homes. Laura, minus a shoe, suffered most, the frozen ground cutting through her stocking and lacerating her foot. Libbie helped her over the rough ground as best she could but the intense cold finally overcame the efforts of the little Indian and she fell again and again.

Libbie Never-Miss-A-Shot then carried her as far as she could but eventually was forced to lay her down in the snow. Then she found that Laura had ceased to breathe.

Leaving the dead girl in the snow, Libbie went on through the storm until she reached an Indian camp where she fell exhausted.

Libbie is back at the mission, suffering from exposure, but the white doctor at the mission says she will recover.

Survives Niagara Falls, Slips on Orange, Dies

London.—A dispatch to the Evening News from Christchurch, New Zealand, says that "Bobby" Leach, who went over Niagara falls in a steel barrel in 1911, is dead from injuries received when he slipped on a piece of orange peel in the street.

Leach broke a leg, which it was found necessary to amputate.

"Bobby" Leach, a Canadian, achieved worldwide notoriety through his feat at Niagara falls. He was the second person to go over the falls and live, the first being Mrs. Anne Edson Taylor of Niagara Falls, N. Y., who made the trip in a barrel October 24, 1901.

Leach's trip was made July 25, 1911. He was severely battered and bruised in the drop of 158 feet over the horseshoe falls, but his injuries were only superficial. He was forty-nine years old when he performed the feat.

Diagram Showing How to Add a Stage of Radio Frequency to a Three-Tube Regenerative Set.

By C. J. KELLY
In New York Herald-Tribune.

More distance, greater selectivity and an all-around better set may be had by using a stage of tuned radio frequency with three-tube regenerative sets of the type utilizing a variable tickler coil to secure feedback. Although intended for this special type of receiver, the tuned radio-frequency stage may be used to advantage with almost any receiver that is not neutralized.

Aside from increasing the distance and selectivity of the set, the extra stage will permit the use of a loop antenna—a highly desirable feature these days when stations are only 15 kilocycles apart and selectivity is an all-important thing. As the loop has directional properties, interference from man-made static can practically be eliminated by operating the set with the loop in such a position that it picks up a minimum of interference.

Aerial for Best Results.

With an aerial and ground the set will be found to be superior in some ways to many five-tube radio-frequency sets. The combination of tuned radio frequency and regeneration will make for better distance records.

The radio-frequency stage may be built in a small cabinet and placed alongside of the three-tube set.

A double-circuit jack has been placed across the secondary tuning condenser to receive the plug to which the two leads from the loop are attached. By using this method it only will be necessary to insert the plug to use the loop, the double-circuit jack automatically disconnecting the secondary coil.

The loop will be found excellent for use where it is impossible to erect an aerial. The set can be installed in an automobile or motor boat and operated in a few moments, as it only is necessary to connect the battery leads and inseft the plug.

The parts for the radio-frequency stage are all standard, and while most fans already have some of the parts around their workshop they may be obtained in any well-stocked parts store for very little.

List of Parts.

The following is a complete list of parts needed to construct the stage: One radio-frequency coil, one .0005 variable condenser; one panel, 7 by 10 inches; one baseboard 6 by 6 inches; one standard socket; one rheostat, 30 ohms; five binding posts, brackets and screws for coil and baseboard.

If the coil is to be purchased, any fixed coupler having enough inductance in the secondary to permit it to work over the broadcast wave lengths (from 200 to 600 meters) when tuned by a .0005-microfarad condenser can be used.

To wind the coil at home a composition or hard-rubber tube about six inches long and three and one-half inches in diameter is used, as it is a stock size and will be easy to obtain. A spool of No. 22 gauge double cotton-covered wire will be ample for winding the coils and connecting the set.

A 10-turn primary and a 50-turn secondary are wound on the same tube, separated by about one-quarter of an inch. Be careful to wind both coils in the same direction.

After the connections have been checked the rheostats on both the stage and the detector are turned on. Tuning will be the same as with any other set. The dials will differ slightly (usually a few degrees) because of the circuits not being matched, but both circuits will be in resonance when a station's carrier wave is received loudest.

Excessive squealing or whistling may be caused by reversed primary leads or too high plate voltage. Reduce the plate voltage from 45 to 22 volts. If this does not stop the squealing reverse the leads to the primary on the detector coil.

Strong Battery Voltage Necessary for Speaker

Many good sets fail to deliver sufficient volume on the loud speaker because they are not supplied with the necessary power to do so. Forty-five volts on the plates of the amplifiers will not deliver enough current to the magnets of the loud speaker to produce loud signals. Ninety volts will give much better results, and is certainly worth the additional cost. An extra grid bias is sometimes necessary with higher voltage, and this is connected with 4½-volt "C" battery, which is connected between the F post of the transformer and the filament. The negative terminal of the battery connects to F and the positive terminal to the filament.

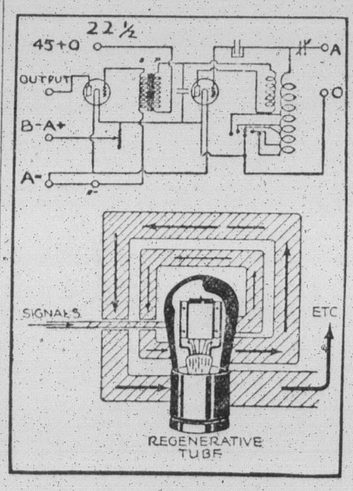
FOREFATHERS OF RADIO

By GEORGE LEWIS
of The Crosley Radio Corporation.

While a student in the postgraduate school of Columbia university, New York city, Edwin Armstrong became interested in the development of receiving circuits for using the radio tube. Eight and nine-tube sets were coming into vogue, and it began to appear that soon the owner of a radio set would have to remodel his home in order to get it into one room. Armstrong invented a system whereby a single tube is used both as a detector and an amplifier, coils being arranged so that after the signal current has gone through the detector tube once, it is, in effect, sent back through that tube several times to be further amplified. The result is that one detector tube used in this way is equivalent to a detector tube and two or more amplifier tubes used in the old way. He called this system "regeneration."

Edwin H. Armstrong.

Regenerative sets became popular very rapidly, since a regenerative set operates as efficiently as any other type of set using several more tubes. They are still the most efficient type of set today. In fact, regeneration is the technical principle which has made it possible to manufacture the best of radio sets within the reach of the average man's pocketbook.



Cause of Vibrations in Set

Mechanical vibrations of the entire receiver may be the result of placing the speaker atop the receiver. This often causes ringing noises which start faintly and gradually increase until they reach such proportions that they drown out the signals. Such noises are the result of the microphonic action of the tube elements.

Brave Women Honored

The bishop of London has dedicated in Holy Trinity church, Gray's Inn road, a chapel to the memory of "The Brave Women of the War." The chapel is draped in scarlet, above the altar table of black oak being a framed picture of the Virgin and Child, while the floor is paved with tiles of black and white marble. The bishop said it was a very striking thing indeed that a poor parish in a poor district seven years after the war should be the first to put up such a memorial. Except for the Nurse Cavell monument in Trafalgar square that was the first war memorial he had dedicated simply to the memory of brave women themselves.—London Times.

Greatest of Tyrants

Time is the greatest of tyrants. As we go on toward age he taxes our health, limbs, faculties, strength and features.—John Foster.

ATTRACTED BY BOOKLET

Read of Other Women Who Found Health

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 35 Central Ave., was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her story is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at some time in their lives. "I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got relief." Mrs. Hegmann also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation, with good results. She says, "I am recommending your medicines to all I know who have symptoms the same as mine, and to others whom I think it will help. You may use my statement as a testimonial, and I will answer any letters sent to me by women who would like information regarding your medicines."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them.

The Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass., will gladly furnish other women with these names upon request.

Also Represented People

Congressman Sol Bloom was forcibly impressed with the fact that a public official is the servant of the people at a recent gathering in New York city.

Mr. Bloom was scheduled as principal speaker, but when he arrived a surging crowd blocked the path to the entrance of the building. The representative gently asked the nearest shoulder if he could get through.

"Who're you?" asked the owner of the shoulder.

"I represent the people and am supposed to speak here tonight," explained Mr. Bloom.

"What of it?" growled the would-be member of Mr. Bloom's audience. "I am the people."—New York Evening Post.

Balboa Theater

According to a new policy adopted by Balboa Theatre, patrons will be given two complete shows each week at the popular playhouse commencing Saturday, June 12, with opening days Sunday and Wednesday. This also includes two complete Fanchon and Marco stage presentations.

For this Saturday, Sunday Monday and Tuesday, one of the best pictures of the year will be shown. Douglas MacClean dealer in laughs, gags and thrills, will present "That's My Baby," which is a regular mirth-getter of the rollicking, swift-rolling type of situation comedy.

Fanchon and Marco will present a gorgeous spectacle in conjunction with the screen production. "Aztec Idea", is said to be Fanchon and Marco's greatest. In front of an Aztec Temple with urns burning incense on either side, a group of featured artists will bring the atmosphere of Ancient Aztec days.

Gattison Jones and Elsie Elliott, famous dancers will link ancient days with modern dance. Myra Kinch and Lanore Delara do an effective sword dance in front of the High Priest of the Temple who is Frank Stever, perhaps the best known baritone of the "air" who has been heard over KFI broadcasting station. Stever as "Montezuma" is uniquely costumed with tribal headpiece.

Fanchon and Marco have originated special Aztec dances for the Sunkist Beauties who will appear as Aztec Maidens. There is an old Indian atmosphere in every detail of this magnificient feature staged for the four days beginning Saturday.

"The Volcano," with Bebe Daniels will be on the screen, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with another complete Fanchon and Marco presentation.

West Coast Pictorial News Weekly, comedies and other short reels will be included in the big programs offered to Balboa Theatre patrons. Musical entertainments of high order accompanies each performance.

Cabrillo Theater

A tale as warm and tender as sunlight in Spain is the photodrama "The Girl From Montmartre," at the Cabrillo Theatre this week.

Indeed the similie is not far-fetched when it is learned that the story is based on Anthony Pryde's unforgettable novel, "Spanish Sunlight." Considering the immense success of this book, it seems only reasonable to predict that the film is destined to enjoy similar good fortune.

Romance, thrills and laughter are crowded into space of a few reels with a dexerity that reveals to what marvelous lengths the art of the motion picture has progressed. "The Girl From Montmartre" is not merely a slice of life—but life itself!

Barbara La Marr, the screen's most exotic and charming actress, portrays the role of the Spanish dancer. The necessary wooing is most satisfactorily effected by Lewis Stone. Robert Ellis, William Eugene, Bobby Mack and Mathilde Comont comprise a most capable supporting cast.

"The Girl From Montmartre," deserves to have a career, for not only is the story one of rare appeal but the natural beuty of the famous Balearic Isles, in which the story has its setting, is of surpassing enchantment. Let us have more of these films.

Raymond Godden will play a group of popular selctions on the organ. West Coast Current Kinograms with the latest world events and some excellent short reels complete the program.

Operate on Ty Cobb's Eyes

MUIR AVENUE QUESTIONS

(Contributed to "The Beach News")

An Open Letter to the Council

Gentlemen:

When we, nearly all the owners of lots fronting on Muir avenue, at Ocean Beach, petitioned to have Muir avenue curbed, sidewalked and paved, it was granted and ordered to be done, and in due time it has been done (or partly so), and except a few ugly blemishes it is a fine job. But what we owners of lots in blocks 92 and 95 between Abbott and Bacon streets want to know is WHY the sidewalks and curbs were omitted? When this addition was put on the market there was an attempt made to put in curbs and sidewalks, just a sham show to help sell it. This is now a mess of wreckage and is a disgrace to the street and the lots fronting on it, and hardly safe to walk on. Why was our part of the petition ignored? We want it finished like the rest of the street.

DESECRATING THE EAGLE

Col. E. Hofer, president of the Oregon State Humane society, states that several months ago a splendid specimen of the golden eagle, the emblem of American freedom and liberty, was caught in a steel trap in one of our western states and is today kept caged, to attract tourists at a roadside hot-dog counter.

Under a sign that reads, "Hear the Eagle scream and buy Tacoma Brew," on a great national highway, thousands of citizens behold the insignia of the world's greatest republic used to boom the sandwich trade and lure nickels from the traveling public—licensed for this purpose by a state game commission.

The great bird of freedom, with claws and beak of gold and ebony, with wings spreading seven feet from tip to tip, is robbed of his freedom and deprived of God's sunlight, divorced from his mate and his home in the high Cascades, to be fed on butcher's offal and stared at by indifferent Americans.

OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL NOTES

THE CAKE-MAKER

By Lola Bell Kennedy
Ocean Beach School, Grade 6-A

One day mother and I went to visit a friend. We left my little sister home because she didn't want to go. About five minutes after we had left she decided to make a cake.

She pulled a chair up to the pantry and opened the pancake flour. Then she got everything in her reach and put it in a bucket of water.

She was just in the act of putting it in the pans when we came in. Mother gave a startled gasp and cried, "Bee, what are you doing?" Bee began to jump and clap her hands in an exciting way and shout, "Cake, mama; I'm makin' cake."

Mother gave her a spanking and told her not to do it again. But you may well guess we never left her alone again or we would never have had any food in the house.

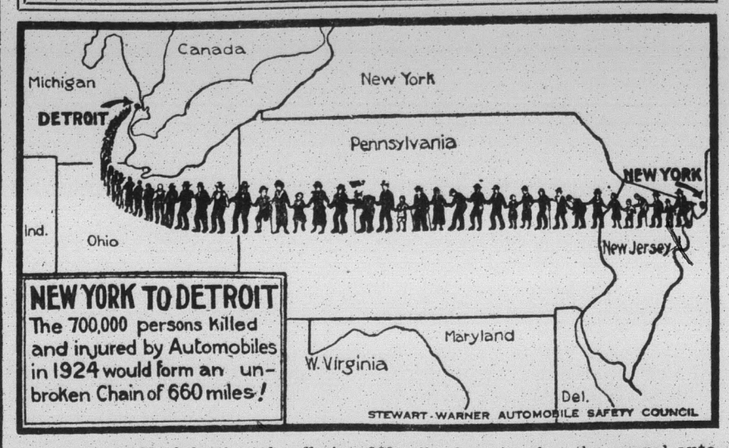
Caravan of Death 660 Miles Long Is Nation's Auto Story



A CARAVAN of death and suffering 660 miles long is what the annual automobile casualties of the United States would form if placed in one continuous line. From New York to Detroit, painful mile on painful mile, this ghastly and pathetic human chain would reach. This graphic picture, prepared by the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, tells its own story. Twenty-two thousand killed annually by automobiles and 660,000 injured is the present toll caused by thoughtless drivers and careless pedestrians. Only a small per cent of the accidents are due to defects in the cars or can rightly be called unavoidable.

PAGEANT OF FLOWERS THIS SUNDAY NIGHT

The members of the Baptist church school in their Children's Day service will present the Pageant of Flowers, Sunday evening, June 13, at 7:30 p. m. Every department of the school will take part in the program, which will consist of four scenes. First, the home, in which is pictured the drama of everyday life. Second, the dawning light, with the beautiful flowers and the gonds of the birds, with the music of the bells, and the voice that tells of the wonderful work of the wind, the rain and the sun. Third, the enlarging life, introducing new elements into the home life. Fourth, the transformation. This scene sets forth the power of love and song.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

FEET

JAZZBO, the man from Mars, determined to get to the bottom of the industrial unrest that everybody in the country was talking about. It would make an interesting chapter, he reflected, in his book, "The World People, Their Manner and Customs."

So he sought out Dennis Carboxer, the great labor leader, and asked him pointblank what all the trouble was.

"It's the blanketty-blank blinked-dash capitalists," replied Carboxer promptly. "They're despots, slave-drivers and autocrats. They've got their iron foot on the laboring man's neck, and they're grinding him down, down, down into the bitter dust of poverty."

Suddenly remembering that there are two sides to every story, Jazzbo looked up Pluto Kratt, the famous financier, and asked, "Would you mind telling me what's the matter?"

"It's the double-blank, ricketty-split working man," replied Kratt. "He's a natural born tyrant. He's got his foot on the capitalist's neck and he won't be satisfied till he hears something crack."

Wondering dazedly whether there might be three sides to a story, Jazzbo looked up Jerry W. Rim, the well known spokesman for the general or consuming public, who said, "The whole thing in a nutshell is—labor and capital have both feet on the consumer's neck, and they're jumping up and down in a frenzy."

"Thank you," murmured Jazzbo politely as he swooned.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

PRINTING

IN ANCIENT and medieval times in Europe books were made by hand copying of manuscripts; that was the nearest approach to printing known. It is China that we must credit with the first printing at a very early date, the Chinese having originated as early as 50 B. C. a method of printing in ink on paper by means of wood blocks. It was not until nearly a thousand years later that printing in this manner came to be extensively practiced.

When we speak of the origin of printing, however, we are thinking of printing with movable type; in other words, the invention of the printing press. And the name of the real inventor of typography is shrouded in a quarrel that has continued for hundreds of years, kept alive by the contemporary supporters of the original claimants to the honor of this wonderful art.

The dispute has now been narrowed down to two names, Laurens Janszoon Coster of Haarlem, Holland and John Gutenberg of Mainz, Germany. Coster is said to have invented movable types of metal in 1420, which were stolen by one of his workmen and carried to Mainz. Gutenberg is known to have experimented with printing at Strassburg in 1439 and to have carried on a printing business in Mainz from 1448 until his death, about 1468. Upon the sacking of Mainz, printing was suspended, and the workmen and pupils scattered throughout Europe knowledge of the art which until that time had been kept a secret.

The first press in England was set up in 1477 in Westminster by William Caxton and one found its way to this country, then the "Colonies of North America," and was set up at Harvard college in 1639. This "press" still continues under the name of the "University Press."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

HAVE YOU A FRIEND?

HAVE you a friend who entertains for you sentiments of esteem, respect and affection when enemies, like dogs, snap at your heels and do their utmost to bring about your downfall?

Have you a friend who, when you are in sorrow or on the verge of financial failure, will come to you and proffer substantial assistance instead of advice, good perhaps in days of prosperity, but of no practical use in hours of adversity?

Have you a friend who seeks your society and welfare, a well-wisher who will stretch out his or her hands and help you bear the burdens that are crushing out your hope and life?

If you have such an ally, you have indeed one of the greatest blessings to be found this side of Heaven, sent to you, no doubt, by Heaven itself.

You cannot be too grateful for such fellowship, nor too careful in its retention.

Counsel is good, but when you are hungry and thirsty, a piece of bread and a cup of cold water are infinitely better, productive of more cheer and encouragement than all the adhortations in the world.

Those who are lavish with advice when put to the final test very often are not well-doers.

Generally speaking, they will not open their purse to you though rich in worldy goods, or take you by the arm to help you over the rough places when your mind is dazed, your steps uncertain and your body is weak and ailing from crushing doubts and fears.

Much of the crime and degredation in big cities is due to an absence of friendship rather than from an inclination to follow crooked paths of sin and darkness.

Friendless and shunned by society, the weak-minded, and not infrequently the strong, give up, despair and head straight for the great, gloomy buildings with iron-barred windows and bolted doors.

A kindly word accompanied with substantial assistance and a manifestation of sincere sympathy in the man or woman who is sliding down, will go farther toward bringing about lasting redemption than condemnation and punishment.

When on earth this was the attitude toward humanity of the Master of Men, whose teachings, alas, we seem to have forgotten!

ONLY A ROSE—

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ONLY a song we fling you,
As some would fling a rose,
Perhaps more hard to sing you
Than sometimes you suppose,
Than you suppose, it sometimes seems,
Who think that songs are only dreams;
And what's a rose but just a flow'r
To wilt, to wither, in an hour?

Only a smile men smile you,
Only a look of cheer,
A moment to beguile you
When some dark day is here—
Only a woman's pray'r at times,
A simple thing like roses, rimes,
And smiles, and other things that men
And women give us now and then.

And yet perhaps too lightly
You hold the singer's song,
For candles flicker nightly
And dreams are dreamed for long
Before a dream becomes a thing
For men to other men to fling,
To fling, as sometimes you suppose,
As lightly as they fling a rose.

And long the plant was tended,
And long the ground was tilled,
And mornings came, and ended,
Before the calyx filled,
Before the bud became the rose
That from a garden someone throws,
Before the bud became a flow'r
To wear upon your breast an hour.

And is it not the raining
Alone the rainbow brings?
By losing, not by gaining,
We learn the worth of things.
And men who smile have learned to smile
Because they wept some other while,
Men give their smiles to men, indeed,
Because, God knows, they know the need.

And what of woman's praying?
She prays because she feels;
She has her loved ones straying,
Her graves by which she kneels.
Perhaps too lightly we esteem
The garden's rose, the poet's dream,
The comrade's smile, the woman's pray'r—
Ah, if men knew, how men would care!

A VARIETY OF DISHES

AN INEXPENSIVE and simple dessert which will be well liked by all, is:

Fruit Dessert.

Take one-fourth of a pound of dried apricots, soak and cook, sweeten while hot and mash through a sieve; when cold add three ripe bananas which have been put through a coarse puree sieve, mix well and serve with flavored whipped cream. Heap the puree in sherbet glasses and top with the whipped cream.

Rice Drop Cakes.

Add one-half cupful of milk to two cupfuls of cooked rice and one well-beaten egg; add two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of baking powder and one-half cupful of shredded coconut, unsweetened. Mix and drop on a well-greased griddle and cook until brown. Serve with maple sirup.

Cheese Soup

To a quart of hot milk add a slice of onion and cook fifteen minutes. Remove the onion and add two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter cooked together. Add to the soup and cook five minutes. Add a cupful of rich grated cheese and when it is dissolved serve at once.

As Told by Irvin S. Cobb

ALMOST STARTLING

IN THE days when Frank A. Munsey was in active editorial charge of his various weekly and monthly publications he had a serious-minded office boy who took things literally—and with due deliberation.

One day Congressman Thomas B. Reed, then speaker of the house, came from Washington to New York and dropped into the office of Munsey's Magazine to see its proprietor. Between the famous publisher and the famous statesman a close bond of friendship existed—they were both sons of Maine, for one thing, and they had been intimate associates for years.

The bulky Reed stepped into the anteroom and without giving his name said he wished to see Mr. Munsey. The office boy told him Mr. Munsey was in conference and invited the caller to have a seat. More than half an hour passed before the caller was admitted to the inner room. Then he told Mr. Munsey how he had been kept waiting.

Indignantly the latter issued forth and descended upon the youthful keeper of the outer gates.

"Do you know who that gentleman is that you've kept dawdling about here?" he demanded. "That is the Hon. Thomas B. Reed of Maine!"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Munsey," said the youth. "I thought all the time it was Dr. John Hall."

"But don't you know that Doctor Hall is dead?" said Mr. Munsey.

"Yes, sir," said Truthful James, "that made it seem rather strange to me that he should be calling."

LOVE, AND NOTHING BUT—

By JACK WOODFORD

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

AILSA sat on the edge of her little hard-mattressed, cast-iron bed and looked searchingly into her little blistered mirror upon her scratched and scarred dressing table.

"Ailsa," she said, addressing the reflection in the mirror critically, "you are a nut! Not just an ordinary, garden variety of nut, but a large and canny nut—the sort of a nut that even the squirrels would follow; you better never walk again in Central park." The image in the mirror did not look accusative; rather it smiled back encouragingly; "go ahead and be a nut!" it suggested. "There are lots of worse things."

"But," insisted Ailsa, angered at the images' encouragement when it should have discouraged her, "don't you understand that what I am in danger of doing is going to affect you as much as me? Don't you realize that you may never have the pretty things you have always coveted; don't you know that you may be set down amid surroundings not more congenial than these and perhaps kept there all your life; you'll have to cook and sew, and do your own washing; perhaps even scrub the floor."

"I should worry!" smiled back the reflection. Ailsa, of course, was thinking of the eternal masculine—not two of them, as she should have been—but only one. For it seemed that she could not, somehow, think of Bob Chandler, even when her memories of him were reinforced by such tangible things as eight-cylinder cars, fur coats, ducky apartments on the drive—and a big "classy" church wedding.

Ailsa was in a spring-day predicament. Bob Chandler had called her, shortly after she returned from church, asking permission to take her to supper and for a ride in the country that evening—she had consented; also Ed Miles had called her, shortly after she returned from church, asking permission to call at once and take her for a walk. Without either men having said a word about it, Ailsa knew as well as though she had been legally notified by a voluminous legal document, that both men were going to propose to her. She had expected it for some time, but there had been that in both of their voices today. . . .

Bob Chandler she had met in the store. He had strolled into the department one day looking as though he had stepped out of a strip of celluloid, spied her, looked excited, and, instead of doing the usual nervy thing, immediately left—for Ailsa sold silk stockings at Tracy's. But the next day he had returned with a gorgeous, good-natured, inclined-to-be-fat girl, who turned out to be his sister, and who had somehow managed, while purchasing several pairs of hose which she doubtless did not need, to introduce first herself and then her brother to the little salesgirl. Bob apparently had everything which a person who had stepped out of a strip of celluloid should—not literally—but the way such handsome males are pictured in the movies; moral fiber and automobiles, character and money, manly decency and a good family—but somehow Bob did not have that strange something which Ed unmistakably possessed—and Ed was as poor as a no-cooking-allowed apartment house.

Ailsa's meeting with Ed had been a rather movieish thing. She had gone to a smart little fur shop on Fifth avenue to purchase a tiny choker fur for which she had saved up some six months. She had entered, purchased it and ordered it sent out C. O. D. After leaving the store she had gone to the bank, drawn out her money and returned to her room to await the arrival of the package. And when she got to her room she found that she was no longer the possessor of the money to pay for it—for her pocket had been picked in the subway! And then Ed had come along with the fur—C. O. D. She recalled the interview vividly.

"Package for you, madam."

"Yes, I, I, I—" Ed had eyed her silently.

"You er—haven't the money to pay for it?"

"No," eyes downcast.

"Then why did you . . . maybe you lost your money?"

"No, my pocket was picked!" Even as she had uttered it, Ailsa's face flamed with the knowledge that a "wise" fur deliveryman would have heard that "stall" many times—but this deliveryman had been either unsophisticated or else "wiser" than the rest—or perhaps it had been the tears which stole unbidden down Ailsa's cheeks.

"I'm awfully sorry, young lady," he said, "won't you let me put the fur in 'Will call' for you at the shop; perhaps in a month or so . . ."

"It would take me six months to save up enough to buy it again," Ailsa had quavered. For a long time the young man was silent.

"Here," he said, "you take this fur; I'll take care of it somehow at the shop, and you can send me a dollar weekly until . . ." Ailsa had demurred, but the young man had seemed hurt when she refused his apparently stringless offer and finally, against her better judgment, she consented. The fur had been paid for long ago—and Ed Miles had been a steady caller ever since. Not one of those conventional Wednesday or Thursday nighters—but reasonably regular and irregular. The front door bell rang.

As Ailsa had suspected, Ed headed for a not too conspicuous bench in the park. Ailsa had often wondered just how a man would really propose. She had seen thousands of "movie" versions of the feat; heard thousands of second-hand stories on the subject from girl friends; read hundreds of the versions of this all-important feat contained in the best sellers—but . . . The sun was slanting softly across the top of a large apartment house on Central Park West. Overhead birds, having flown farther than usual inland from the ocean, were diving through air-pockets and squawking hoarsely. The dull rumble from Broadway came to them softened by the trees through which it was filtered, and here and there, in the distance, large electric signs began to flash on. A policeman, nearing the end of his day's tour of duty, strolled past and cast a not unfriendly glance at the pair; nearby children played make-believe near a tiny pond. Ed was silent for a time, and when he spoke it was in a voice very grave and portentous. He was abrupt; not at all movieish.

"Ailsa, you of course know that I love you—have always loved you from the very first time I knew you. Love, with me, is not an everyday affair. I have, of course, like every other city man, been out with quite a few girls. Some of them I thought, for a time, I loved; most of them I knew I didn't. I always thought that that 'grand passion' stuff you're always hearing about was bunk—but it isn't. Somehow, from the very first, I have felt that you are the only girl who will ever really matter in my life. I'm not much of a catch; I haven't got the money that Bob Chandler has; but, while I think that Bob, from the little I could judge of him the day we three went to dinner together, is a prince of a chap, I feel that I can make you just as happy—for I think, little girl, somehow, that you love me, if only just a bit." Ed paused. It was Ailsa's turn to speak, but she did not wish to speak. A proposal, no matter what the technique, is always vitally interesting. Ailsa no more desired to interrupt it than she would have desired to rise in a motion picture house and yell: "Say, why don't you have the hero rescue the girl now?" Ed resumed:

"Before you say anything definite to me, little girl, I want you to think carefully. Remember that Bob has money, plenty of it. Not four-room, steam-heated apartment money—but eight-cylinder, elevator apartment and maid money! Possibly he loves you nearly as much as I do, and I have no reason to suppose that he is anything but a square shooter. If you decide to take me, instead of him, I want you to do it for no other reason on earth than that you love me—and you certainly could not marry me in my present circumstances of life for any other reason. With you as a helpmeet I will rise—there is no question about that." Ailsa wondered if Ed had deliberately chosen this "open-air" variety of proposal, where demonstrations of any kind were impossible, so that she might have every chance in the world to think clearly, and not be influenced by anything but the think part of her. In a kaleidoscopic panorama before her mind's eye floated a veritable pageant of shiny cars, pretty apartments, soft silks, theater boxes, cafe suppers, glittering jewelry and unlimited charge accounts. She enjoyed the vision for a minute or two and then turned to Ed.

"You're on, Ed," said she simply. "I do love you." If the policeman had been told at this moment, as he was walking wearily back along his beat, that the young man on the bench had just proposed to the girl and been accepted he would have said, "Nonsense!" for it was certainly no "movie" proposal.

The girl's words had a strange effect upon the young man. He seemed to snap into another mood entirely; he turned to her with the most radiant smile she had ever seen on any human countenance.

"You little angel! Oh, you little angel!—I was almost tempted to tell you before. I'm not the delivery boy at the shop—I own it. That day you came in and I saw you for the first time, through a little window in my office, I couldn't resist the temptation to deliver the fur myself—there was something about you from the minute I saw you . . . I may not have eight-cylinder money, but I have six-cylinder money—and believe me, little girl, you'll never want for anything—you're the real goods."

"Here, here, folks," snapped the outraged officer, "you can't pull that stuff on a park bench—move on!"

Obeyed His "Hunch"

The "hunch" goes back to the time of Socrates, who called it his daemon. As he was about to drink the cup of poison hemlock, friends came to him with a plan to escape. But he refused, saying that he had a hunch it was all right for him to die. "All my life I have been under the influence of my daemon," he told them. "When I have been about to do a wrong thing it opposed me. When I was right there was no opposition. And as I have had no opposition in this case I shall go ahead and die."—Capper's Weekly.

FOR TRAVEL AND SPORTS; NEW HEADWEAR ATTRACTS

AN ATTRACTIVE company of summer coats, the latest (and last) offerings of the current season, are making their entry. These new arrivals have "travel," "pastimes" and "vacation" expressed in their designing as plainly as if they bore placards with the printed words and they include some novel, semiformal types that are unusually interesting.

For midsummer there are unlined cape-coats of light-colored flannels and similar coats of crepe-satin in light colors. A little heavier than these are the sleeveless coats, with capes that wrap about the arms at the front. These are made of lightweight materials and lined with thin silk; polka-dot silks or other printed patterns, used for lining, also serve to make a long scarf to be wrapped about the throat. These may be classed as semi-sports styles and are all attractive and practical. But cheerful colors are not confined to pastime coats; they appear, in deeper tones, in tweeds and homespuns, among the usual mixtures and neutral colors. This innovation in color, with short detachable capes that are buttoned about small, high collars, on some models, and hoods attached at the back on others, are outstanding new features in midseason styles.

Two Midseason Coats.

Tweeds in fancy weaves, sometimes introducing lively colors, appeared in coats and suits early in the season and have been well received. A coat made of this new type of tweed mixture is shown at the right of the two models illustrated and is a smart garment for travel and general wear. It has emplacements of smooth-surfaced cloth on the collar, pockets and sleeves. For those who like mannish types the coat at the left is shown. It is a swagger affair, in blue and gray, or other mixtures, and is as plain as possible.

The pendulum of fashion which finally swung to the extreme of simple and unimportant styles in winter millinery started in an opposite direction this spring. It is rapidly traveling now away from uniform and uninteresting headwear in the direction of individual and more complicated style in hats that express personality as well as cover heads. It is remarkable that the most important item in the costume should ever have been so neglected, and when we finally arrived at the place where women of all types and ages wore exactly the same kinds of hats we woke to the meaninglessness of our headwear.

In the group of five hats pictured here we have examples of real millinery art as it flourishes today. Each hat differs from the others and each reveals the work of an artist—a French artist of acknowledged genius for designing. From them we can gather the high-lights of the new modes—the higher crowns, the introduction of wide brims, the combinations of straw braid and millinery fabrics in the construction of shapes, the revival of flower and feather trimmings. This millinery is worthy to be worn by women of importance.

The group does not include some prominent additional shapes and styles brought out for midsummer. Among these the square-crowned Spanish sailor, with either straight or drooping brim, narrower at the back, seems destined to be a great favorite. Wide-brimmed milan hats, ballibuntls, bangkoks and hair braids are shown in quantities and in varied shapes. Crocheted straw hats in the smaller, close-fitting shapes are favorites for the street and for traveling and combinations of straw and silk, so soft that they can be conveniently carried in a suitcase are in a class by themselves and are called "luggage hats." The two more important developments of the modes in millinery are the increased demand for straw hats and hair braids and the ever widening brims. In the latter particular indications are that fashion will go to extremes by the time midsummer arrives.

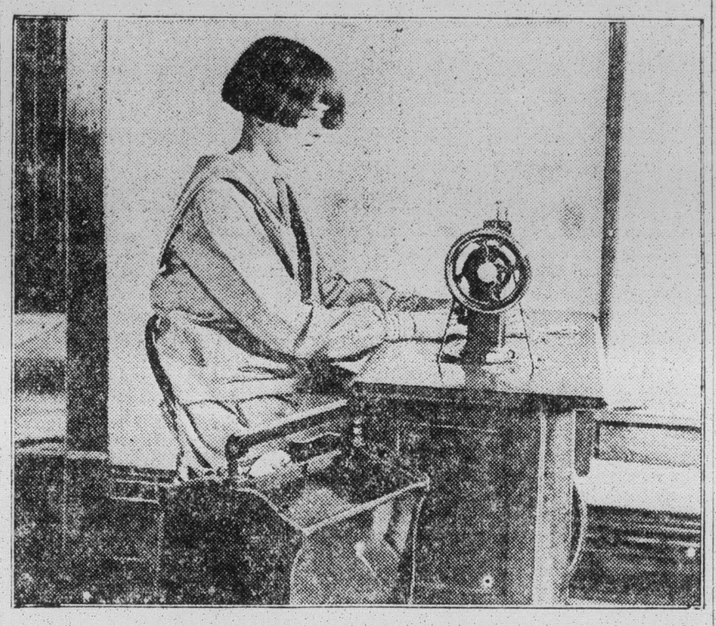
LIMBERING UP THE HOME SEWING MACHINE



Is Your Sewing Machine in Good Order?

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every sewing machine needs cleaning at frequent intervals, even when in daily use, says the United States Department of Agriculture. If the machine has been closed and unused for any length of time, it will probably need a thorough going over. After wiping and dusting it thoroughly, fill your oil can with kerosene and oil every part, including the treadle shaft and lower wheel axles, if it is a foot-driven machine. Run the machine vigorously without thread until you are sure the kerosene has had a chance to loosen every bit of old gummed-up oil and dirt. Then put good quality machine oil in your can and oil the machine with that. Use light mineral oil or sperm oil, or any special oil recommended by the makers of your machine. Wipe all accessible parts so there will be no likelihood of getting oil on your material. Thread the machine and work off on scraps some of the first thread that must pass through or near oiled parts. As an extra precaution to prevent accidental oil spots tie a bit of wool around the presser foot post just above the needle.

Look Over Details.

When the stitching on your scraps is clean you can safely start to sew, but first look over several other details. See if the stitch is right for the use intended, and adjust the thumb screw that regulates the length of the stitch. Some women use the same stitch whether they are making furniture covers or party dresses, and wonder why their clothes never look as attractive as those made by somebody else who uses a small stitch, fine thread, and a fine needle, on nice materials. You can save energy, however, on draperies, sheets, and other household articles, by using a medium stitch that covers the distance faster. Notice whether your tension is right for the thread and kind of material on which you expect to start sewing. Examine the belt to see if it is tight enough. Tired feet and aching backs are often due to working strenuously at the treadle when the belt slips. If the belt is slack, open it and cut off a half-inch or more, pinch the connecting wire back in place, and see what a difference this one change makes! If you expect to do a great deal of sewing this season, this is a good time to consider the possibility of investing in an electric motor.

Look to Needles.

Lastly, see if you have needles of various sizes, in good condition. Blunt and bent needles should be thrown away. Always use the correct needles for your make of machine, and keep a supply on hand to fit the sizes of thread you expect to use. Nothing is more discouraging to the home sewer than to break a needle and not find another of the same size to take its place. Strong course needles are needed for heavy work, but on thin materials they punch ugly big holes and spoil the appearance of the work.

Get into the habit of closing up the machine when you stop work for the day. A little dust can undo all your efforts at cleaning up your machine and making it run easily.

MILK NEEDED BY YOUNG CHILDREN

Many Different Ways in Which to Serve Liquid.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To get a child to take enough of the milk needed in the daily diet, get some drug store "straws" and let him sip his milk through one of these occasionally. Make a milk shake once in a while with fruit juice or cocoa as the flavoring. Also try milk-vegetable soups. So many kinds of vegetables can be used in this way that you can get many different flavors. Cook his cereal in milk instead of water. Milk toast and a simple milk-cereal pudding vary the monotony also. Make junket now and then with a flavoring he likes or serve it with crushed fresh or canned fruit. Custards, soft, baked, or boiled, are another good way. Try all these methods of hiding the milk but do not overwork any one until the novelty wears off.

Drug Store "Straws" Make It Interesting to Drink Milk.

Best Sources of Iodine

Fish, particularly from salt water, oysters, clams, and other sea foods are among the best-known sources of iodine among the common foods. In regions where a regular supply of sea foods is not readily available, iodine is being given in chocolate-flavored tablets and iodized table salt.

ROAST LAMB WITH SPINACH STUFFING

Shoulder Meat Is Tender and of Good Flavor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A good many housekeepers are unfamiliar with the possibilities of a shoulder of lamb, and the leg is considered too large or too expensive to serve very often. The shoulder meat is tender and of good flavor. The whole piece is generally lighter in weight than the leg from the same animal, and sells for less per pound. Because of the number and location of the bones, carving a shoulder is not quite so simple as carving a leg, and possibly this fact explains why the shoulder is not used as often. One way of making the roast easier to carve is to have the butcher take out the shoulder blade. It is possible to bone the entire shoulder and bake it in a roll, but the meat will be juicier and of better flavor if the shoulder blade only is removed. The cavity is to be filled with a special spinach stuffing which is made of the following materials:

2 cups dry bread crumbs
½ pound cleaned spinach leaves
4 tablespoonfuls butter
2 tablespoonfuls chopped celery
1 tablespoonful chopped green pepper
1 tablespoonful chopped onion
½ teaspoonful salt
¼ teaspoonful pepper

Cut the spinach up as small as possible, after thoroughly washing it. Put it in a pan with the pepper, also, minced fine, the onion, and half the butter. Cook about two minutes, enough to wilt the spinach slightly, stirring constantly. Then push to one side of the pan, melt the remaining butter in the empty part, and mix with it the bread crumbs so that they absorb the butter. This is simply an easy way of buttering the crumbs without using another pan. Mix the spinach and crumbs and stir until it is a little dry. The spinach, of course, will become more moist as the stuffing cooks. Put the stuffing in the cavity, sew the edges together, and place the meat in a baking pan. Rub seasonings and flour all over the outside, and brown the meat thoroughly in a little fat, in a hot oven. Pour half a cupful of hot water over the roast, adjust the cover of the roaster closely, and cook from two to three hours in a slow oven, bone side down.

Protein in Cow's Milk

Cow's milk contains more protein less sugar, and slightly more fat than woman's milk, and the fat globules are larger. Also it is said to form a tougher curd. Fortunately, most healthy babies thrive on good cow's milk or on cow's milk simply modified.

Fox Neatly Changed Places With Hunter

A resident of Middletown, Conn., while driving over a mountain saw a fox near the road. Parking his car the man got out with his gun and started on a long chase. Strangely enough the fox did not stop for the man to catch up to him and after a while the fox was nowhere to be seen. Disappointed and foot weary, the man returned to his auto.

What do you suppose the hunter found on his return to the auto? Something had fallen clean through the top of his car. On the front seat, looking intently at the dashboard with all its "finxin's" was Mr. Fox himself. The hunter was so stupefied at the sight that he dropped his gun and ran down the road as fast as his legs could carry him. When he got back with reinforcements the fox had left for parts unknown.—Pathfinder Magazine.

DON'T let mosquitoes spoil your summer. Spray them with Flit.

Flit spray clears your home in a few minutes of disease-bearing flies and mosquitoes. It is clean, safe and easy to use.

Kills All Household Insects

Flit spray also destroys bed bugs, roaches and ants. It searches out the cracks and crevices where they hide and breed, and destroys insects and their eggs. Spray Flit on your garments. Flit kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit spray did not stain the most delicate fabrics.

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. It is harmless to mankind. Flit has replaced the old methods because it kills all the insects—and does it quickly.

Personal Attention To Every Customer

America's Inventors

Are Working For You

BYLLESBY ENGINEERING AND MANAGEMENT CORPORATION
ENGINEERS-MANAGERS

Encouraged by the electric light and power companies of California, eminent inventors, scientists and chemists are continually striving to better your electrical service, and, through the improvement of appliances and the invention of new labor-saving equipment, to bring more convenience and comfort to your home.

The efforts of these noted individuals have a two-fold result. First, by the improvement of generating and distribution equipment, the efficiency of the power company has been increased. And, secondly, because of this increased efficiency the customer receives better electric service at a reduction in cost.

Giant electric generating machines have been built, and long distance transmission lines constructed bringing the wonders of electricity to the small mountain communities and the remote agricultural districts.

But regardless of distance, or difficulty of construction, the average cost of electric service in less than it was before the war, while the cost of commodities has increased 65 per cent since 1913.

Our commercial department will gladly assist you in solving your electrical problem whether it be light, power or heat, and this service is without charge.

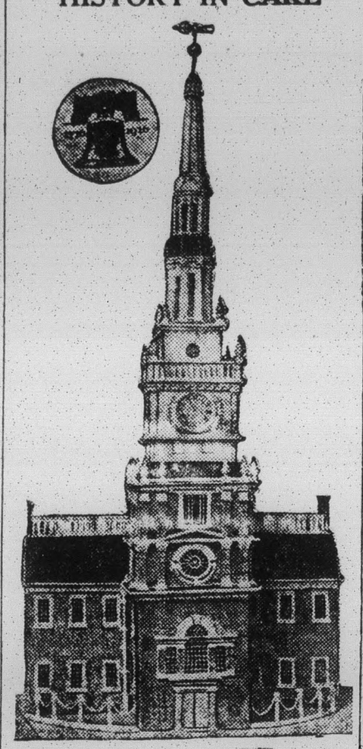
HISTORY IN CAKE



This replica of historic Independence Hall in Philadelphia is a fine example of the baker's art. It was made by the chef of one of Philadelphia's leading hotels to advertise the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which will open in that city June 1 and run to December 1 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of American Independence. The "State House" stands on a table at the entrance to the main dining room of the hotel.

Prize Winners

OF THE

ESPAÑOLA

RECIPE CONTEST

For the Month of May

First prize, $5, goes to Mr. Budd Carberry, owner and manager of Budd's Fish Restaurant, located at the foot of Niagara Avenue, Ocean Beach, for the following recipes: Espanola Fritters, Espanola Waffles and Espanola Goulash.

Mr. Carberry runs the Restaurant known as Budd's Fish House at Ocean Beach and this Sunday he is going to put on a special dinner where he will serve the above dishes and where you will be able to get the Espanola Relish of a Thousand Uses. Mr. Carberry is one of the best chefs along this coast and we can vouch for that, as he serves the best fish dinner on the Pacific coast. So come in this Sunday and find out what Espanola is and why it is the Relish of a Thousand Uses.

Second prize goes to Mrs. R. S. Williams of Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania, for a recipe on a TUNA SALAD.

Espanola is sold in your neighborhood Grocery. Go and ask him about it. Ask him to show you and let you taste the Relish of a Thousand Uses. Get in the Contest, as we give prizes for the best recipe submitted to us and which we will try out, and if O. K. publish in our recipe book. So get in and try for one of these prizes.

Germany, where he remained until 1872. Meanwhile, his father had engaged in the business of refining sugar, and upon returning from Germany young Spreckels entered his father's sugar mill as an apprentice. At the age of 22 years he became superintendent of the plant.

The shipping firm of J. D. Spreckels & Brothers was founded in 1880. This later became the Oceanic Steamship company, which has for years operated a fleet of steamers between San Francisco, Hawaii, the South Sea islands, Australia and New Zealand.

Came Here in 1887

Mr. Spreckels first came to San Diego in 1887, on board his yacht, the Lurline. The climate and harbor attracted his business acumen, and he decided to take part in the future development of the city and environs. Shortly after his arrival here he and his brother, the late Adolph Bernard Spreckels, took over Hotel del Coronado, and later they organized the Coronado Beach company and established the electric railway system.

Purchased Real Estate

Among the early business ventures by John D. Spreckels was his acquisition of real estate in the San Diego business center and the construction of fine buildings. Soon after establishing his business interests here, Mr. Spreckels and his brother bought the San Diego Union. This was in 1890, and in 1901 he bought the Evening Tribune. He organized the San Diego and Arizona Railroad company, and the completion of that railway was due to his acumen and energy.

Many Enterprises

In his extensive business holdings here, his brother, the late Adolph Bernard Spreckels, was associated with him. Among large corporations in which he was the active head are the Western Sugar Refining company; the Spreckels Sugar company; Hotel del Coronado and Coronado Beach companies; Coronado Tent City; the San Diego Electric Railway company; the San Diego & Coronado Ferry company; the Coronado Water company; the San Diego & Arizona Railway company, and the Oceanic Steamship company. He also owned the San Diego hotel and the Golden West hotel.

Mr. Spreckels was a 33rd degree Mason, having completed the circle of both the York and the Scottish Rite bodies. He was a member of the Cuyamaca club, the San Diego Yacht club, the San Francisco Yacht club, the Pacific Union club and the Bohemian club of San Francisco, and the San Francisco Art association.

Home and Family

Mr. Spreckels owned a beautiful residence in Coronado. He was fond of music and yachting. In the Coronado home is a fine pipe organ so built and fitted into the house that all its tones are conserved. His yacht Venetia is one of the finest on the Pacific coast. John D. Spreckels was married in October, 1877, to Miss Lillie C. Sieben, who passed away in San Diego a few years ago. They had four children, Mrs. Grace Hamilton, Mrs. Paul Wegeforth, Claus Spreckels, and the late John D. Spreckels, Jr.

Ocean Beach School Notes

Miss Kate Spani, Principal

Written for "The Beach News"

By Bonnie Johnston, Grade 6-A

The children of the 3-A grade compared their writing of February with that of the end of the term. They were very much surprised to see how much they had improved.

Fredericka Kistener has been transferred from the McKinley school to the Ocean Beach school.

The children of the 2-A room started a scrap book for Caroline Man, who has been sick with scarlet fever for a month. The book contains puzzles, stories, pictures, and many other nice things.

Mr. Robinson of the Automobile club called at school Monday, and left certificates for the members of the safety committee.

We are preparing for a field meet next Thursday, June 24. All grades will take part.

Miss Morehead, teacher of the 6-A grade, was absent from school Wednesday.

Miss Schaffer, the art supervisor, visited the Ocean Beach school Tuesday. She gave the children of the 6-A grade some very helpful ideas for their art work.
